Couple suffer serious wounds from dog attack

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

A man and woman are recovering from serious dog bites inflicted on various parts of their bodies early last week.

The couple, a 27-year-old woman and 28-year-old man, were attacked by two Akitas inside the home southwest of Didsbury on Westcott Road on the evening of July 26.

The two were returning to the house that is shared with another couple. Entrance to the suite is gained through the garage where a male and female Akita were housed with seven new pups.

The man was looking after the dogs owned by the other renters, who were in and out of town and was attending to them when he came home. The woman came inside through the man door with her pet beagle, when the female Akita lunged at her. The man intervened and the male dog jumped to attack as well.

Didsbury RCMP and EMS responded and were able to contain the dogs within the garage. The two individuals were taken to Didsbury Hospital around 10 p.m. that night and discharged around 10 a.m. the next morning.

Police said there was "horrific bloodletting" on scene with a great amount of blood lost by both people and the beagle. The couple have significant lacerations on their upper torsos, forearms, hands and thighs. The dog had stents placed into his body to let out the swelling and police guess he will probably require another operation to work on severed blood vessels. Police said the Akitas have no known history of violence.

The couple were able to free themselves from the dogs after hitting them with a stabilizer bar explained Amanda Suthl, bylaw officer for Mountain View County.

"The male that was attacked managed to pick up part of a stabilizer bar and he hit the dog with that. The male dog was attacking him and he managed to get out of the man door. The female managed to do the same and get outside the garage."

The couple left their cellphones inside the garage but were able to get help from neighbours and called the police.

She said the couple, as well as the beagle, have been living there since April and were in contact with the two Akitas every day.

"It's pretty amazing this even happened," she said adding that the only way the couple could get to their suite was through the garage.

Police said the Akitas suffered no visible injuries. Stuhl said Wednesday the City of Calgary Animal Services were in Didsbury to assist in removing the dogs from the home. The two are now in an animal services shelter in Calgary.

"They'll remain for the next 10 days under quarantine. If the owners signed a consent form for them to be euthanized, then they'll be euthanized at the end of 10 days. Otherwise we would have to seek a destruction order under the Dangerous Dogs Act of Alberta," she said.

The owners of the Akitas face two counts of dangerous attack on humans and one count of damage to another animal under the Mountain View County animal control bylaw. The names of the individuals won't be released but Stuhl said they have a court appearance set for September 2 at the Didsbury provincial court.

Toddler-friendly playground goal of new society

Didsbury Playground Society plans to build equipment in Kinsmen Park for six and under

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

A newly-formed society hopes to start construction on Didsbury's first playground designed specifically for children six and under by May 2012.

President Chelsie Hopfie and treasurer Alisa Bisschop of the society went before council last week to ask permission for the playground to be constructed in Kinsmen Park.

"It's an ideal location," said Hopfie. "It's a beautiful area and well treed. I live out of town and when I come in I like to park on Main Street and run my errands and then work our way up to the park," she said of its central location.

"It already has a lot of features we would need," said Bisschop of the shade, fence, grass, and picnic tables.

"It's very visible. A lot of people drive through that road and the playground would be an attractive feature and it's accessible to everyone."

The two mothers said ideally they would like to build it to the east of the playground already located in the park.

The group officially formed about three months ago. They decided to work together to create a playground that would have the right falling heights and equipment for children too small to use normal playground equipment.

Based on their research on local birth rates, school enrolments and the latest published Statistics Canada information, they estimate there are about 400 children under six in town.

They plan to include equipment for children 18 months to six years, including two slides and a tunnel, stairs and a climber wall and independent bouncers.

"... Being a parent has changed my perspective on safety," said Hopfie, adding that developmental abilities of children under six aren't the same and equipment for school-aged children isn't appropriate.

The group has a connection with someone who develops playground equipment that has offered to design and build it at cost. The total price tag sits at $40,000 and would include any resurfacing and small landscaping needed.

The group hopes to use volunteer labour to help with the installation.

"It doesn't mean we'll stop fundraising if we earn more than this," said Bisschop. She said future projects include general upgrades to other parks in town.

Council agreed on Kinsmen Park as a suitable location.

"I know it's something that's definitely needed for the younger age group," said Coun. Gail Nowlan.

The society hopes to introduce itself to the community and start fundraising efforts during Showcase Didsbury in the fall.

"Why allow a speed limit that is too fast?" questioned Coun. Ravi Anderson. "... Allowing kids to go (as fast as 50) is just causing accidents." During the election forum in 2010, reducing the speed limit along 20th Avenue was one of Anderson's concerns. Since getting elected he requested council look into reducing speeds. Town bylaw officers did a traffic survey watching the speed and flows in the area. The findings showed 43 per cent of vehicles were travelling under 30 km/hr and 50 per cent were travelling Speed along this street will soon be brought down to 30 km/hr. Council made the decision last Tuesday after some councillors raised concerns about the safety along the typically congested street.

Youth tobacco reduction requires multi-level effort

DAN SINGLETON

The Harper government has announced that its Federal Tobacco Control Strategy (FTCS), an initiative aimed at reducing the number of current and future youth smokers, has met with considerable success in its first year of operation.

The announcement is not only good news for young people, but also proof that such efforts can make a difference.

And while it is certainly too much to hope that this or any other program can somehow magically eliminate youth smoking, it is an encouraging example of what can be done.

The $16 million FTCS program's mandate includes helping people stop smoking, preventing youth from starting to smoke, and protecting Canadians from exposure to second-hand smoke.

"The FTCS has been successful in reducing smoking in Canada and preventing youth from starting to smoke," said Health Minister Leona Aglukkaq.

As a result, at least in part, of this initiative, Canada now has one of the lowest overall smoking rates in the world, with overall rates dropping from 22 per cent a decade ago to under 20 per cent in 2010.

On the youth side, Health Canada says 13 per cent of Canadian youth are smokers – the lowest-ever recorded percentage.

The Harper government says it will continue to fund the FTCS program, and in doing so support smokers in their efforts to quit, address issues of contraband tobacco, and work towards implementation of recently announced health warnings on cigarette and cigar packaging.

At the provincial level, Alberta already has an effective tool at its disposal to fight youth smoking.

Specifically, the province's Prevention of Youth Tobacco Use Act includes strict prohibitions on cigarette and other tobacco use by young people in all public places.

The legislation makes it unlawful for any person under 18 to possess, smoke or otherwise consume tobacco products, with violators facing fines starting at $100.

Unfortunately, as the daily scenes of young people smoking in public places in every town and city in this province can attest, the Stelmach government has been anything but diligent in enforcing its own youth tobacco legislation.

For their part, school divisions, including Chinook's Edge, have already prohibited students from smoking on school properties. Yet when school starts up again in September, it's a pretty good bet young people will be seen smoking cigarettes on West Central Alberta properties directly adjacent to their schools.

Perhaps Ed Stelmach's replacement will make at least some effort to see that Alberta's youth tobacco legislation is finally enforced.

Or maybe it will just continue to be left up to the federal government to do all the heavy lifting in the youth tobacco fight?

NEWS: NDP LEADER, AND LEADER OF THE OFFICIAL OPPOSITION, JACK LAYTON - TEMPORARILY STEPS DOWN TO FIGHT ANOTHER BATTLE WITH CANCER...

Commentary

Jack Layton's challenge is a moment to seize

JOHNNIE BACHUSKY

Canadians from coast to coast last week were at first shocked and moved by the announcement from federal NDP leader Jack Layton that he was once again ill from cancer, that he needed to take time off from his duties on Parliament Hill to seek treatment, and that the choosing of an interim leader of the party was necessary until he was fit for duty.

This startling news came just two months after Layton's NDP stunned the country in the May federal election with an unprecedented move up as the country's official opposition party, while at the same time sending the separatist Bloc Quebecois to political oblivion.

And what was also decidedly noticeable for most of last week was that the usual political gamesmanship and pettiness between political adversaries stopped, so moved as well by the class and grace the frail looking opposition leader displayed while making his announcement and moving forward with determination to face this weighty challenge of his life.

Jack Layton is not a popular politician here in Central Alberta, a bastion for conservative principles and as inhospitable a place as any to any political belief that leaves the slightest scent of socialism.

The NDP has never won a seat in this part of the province, and chances are it won't in the foreseeable future.

But central Albertans are just as capable as other groups of citizens across Canada to put aside their political differences when compassion, understanding and empathy are clearly the appropriate order of the day.

Think back to late 1994 when news came that Lucien Bouchard, then the charismatic leader of the separatist Bloc Quebecois, was forced to have his leg amputated after contracting a case of flesh-eating disease. Canadians from coast to coast, including central Albertans, cast away their anger at Bouchard's separatist beliefs, which were then accepted in Quebec at unprecedented levels, for genuine concern and best wishes. It must be said that Bouchard made a remarkably quick recovery, so much so he nearly led separatist forces to victory the following year in the Quebec sovereignty referendum.

Feelings of compassion from central Albertans must also go out for Jack Layton, even if he represents a left-of-centre political philosophy that is almost as distasteful for central Albertans as separatism.

Putting aside Layton's political marriage to socialism, think of the human qualities that have come from this man just this year, the things that should make every Canadian feel proud and even humbled.

Already a cancer survivor once, Layton was forced to enter a federal election campaign recovering from a hip injury. He hobbled about across the country during the campaign on a cane, full of life and vigour.

He was easily the most interesting and likeable of all the federal party leaders.

No one knows for sure how long Layton knew he was seriously ill. He did look fresh and full of life immediately after the election campaign but even the most hardened journalists and political observers were shocked by his rapidly deteriorating appearance at the press conference last week. He vowed to fight and move forward with all the energy he can muster in facing this huge challenge. What's more, Layton added, he fully intends to return to the House of Commons by early fall.

Whether that happens or not, central Albertans need only to wish the man well. There is no need to consider for a moment his political affiliation, or whether the so-called Orange Wave that swept through Quebec last May will one day arrive here.

There is a higher ideal at work right now, well beyond politics or what many would consider a healthy disdain for all or any things left of centre.

Through Jack Layton's strength, determination and perseverance we can all salute the very best qualities that are flowing through this fine man, and hope they inspire each and every one of us. These are the ideals that define this great country and people. They rise to a level that is the envy of every other nation and peoples of this world.

They are also everything all Canadians and central Albertans can proudly aspire to each and every day.

Charity ball tournament planned for rodeo weekend

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

KidSport Mountain View is hoping to see the same turnout at this year's charity slow-pitch tournament being held in Didsbury.

Being held for the second consecutive year in Didsbury, chair Pam Cameron said the money raised assists children of low-income families with up to $300 a year to help offset sports registration fees.

"So far we have every team coming back from last year," she said of the six teams that signed up.

This year, she hopes to see eight teams.

"We've been increasing our numbers every year," she said of how many kids they help. Last year she said KidSport was able to help just over 40 children.

To play, teams have to donate $300 and the team has to be broken into a seven-to-three gender split.

The event will run in conjunction with the rodeo

August 19th. The entry fee guarantees three games and includes 10 cabaret tickets per team. For more information, contact Pam Cameron at pamela19@shaw.ca

Aqua Jets ready for regionals

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

Regionals are less than a week away, and members of Aqua Jets swim club are anything but nervous.

"The tournaments are fun," said Jessica Gerle, 11, who's been part of the club for three years. "You get to hang out with other people and you try and beat your personal best," chimed in sister Nicole, 8.

The two agreed tournaments – whether at a district level or higher – are an important part of getting better.

Regionals are August 6. Those who place over the weekend will qualify for provincials.

Coach Rhonda Young said there's a few of the swimmers who have done really well at other tournaments this season and she hopes to see some of them make the cut.

The group started training in May and has travelled to different towns in the last few weeks to compete including Okotoks, High River, Innisfail, Canmore and Calgary.

"My goal is to make it to provincials," said Raven Young, 13, who's been part of the club for six years. Chantelle Neufeld, has also set her goals for provincials.

"I've yet to go to provincials so I hope to get there."

The club practises every day, working on their various strokes and drills. While provincials are on the minds of some of the older students, it doesn't entirely consume them. "I like working with the younger students," said Neufeld, 15. "I like being able to help them during their meets and get them ready and show them where to go," she explained.

"It's also a great way to get out and do some exercise," said Phoenix Chaytor, who said jumping in the pool each night keeps her on track with her fitness goals.

And for others, it's even simpler than that.

"That my mom coaches is my favourite part," said Reign Young, 8.

Local group help build schools, run camps in Jamaica

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

Eleven kids just returned from Jamaica last week but their time wasn't spent lounging on the beach or sightseeing.

The group went down to help build schools for children three to five.

"The government funds schools for older children but they don't subsidize schools for younger ones," said Mike Pickersgill, who moved to Jamaica from Alberta 15 years ago. He currently works in the northeast parish of Jamaica called Port Antonio, as a manager of private villas.

Since being down there, he's gotten involved in helping create schools, known there as basic schools, that supply kitchen and bathroom and classroom for children in the area.

"The state of the school was, well ... it was pretty gross and there was a lot of mess in the school and the (yard), said Jordan Kerr, who just graduated from Didsbury High School and helped spearhead the trip.

His parents know Pickersgill and have often donated some money here or there for projects. Kerr thought it'd be a good idea to take down a group of friends from Didsbury and the surrounding area to help clean up one of the basic schools in Pickersgill's area.

Kerr said that kids typically stay at the school all day while the parents work, so a kitchen is needed to provide them with proper nutrition. Other requirements include a sickroom and bathroom.

Kerr, his brother Jeff, and friend Mike Poffenroth went down three days before the rest of the group arrived. They were there from June 26 to July 13.

"It was pretty gross in the yard," said Kerr, of working to clean up the area so kids could play. The group worked every morning in 30- to 35-degree weather with 80 per cent humidity. "It felt like 40 degrees," he said.

In the afternoon, the group helped play with kids enjoying a summer camp and Kerr said other kids from the area that weren't involved in the camp would sneak in to join.

"It was a lot of fun."

The group, with the help of donations from various families and businesses in Didsbury and area, was able to help cover the costs for a $2,500 cast for an 11-year-old girl with scoliosis.

"They wanted to make a difference in someone's life, and did without thinking of their own needs once back in Canada," said Pickersgill, stunned.

The group finished its stay helping to move gravel, stack bricks and build a kitchen and sick bay. They also started digging for a playground and stage area for the kids to perform on.

Since the group has left, Pickersgill has started work on the roof and done some painting and collected some new toys. He hopes to have things ready to go when the kids return to school in the fall.

"It was great to have these kids help out ... it's just a basic 50 by 50-foot building, but it will help 23 kids."

Town plans for $1.6 million loan

Council is looking to borrow $1.6 million to go towards mortgage payments and retrofitting of recently purchased property.

Last month, council sold its current public works building for $6 million and purchased what's currently referred to as the Joe Schmidt Building for $1.8 million.

Ownership will change hands effective September 1 with plans to have the physical move completed by December 1.

The mortgage, from Mountain View Credit Union, is in the amount of $1,387,500 with term loan of $212,500 to retrofit the commercial building.

The terms of the repayment for the mortgage loan is set at a fixed rate of 3.5 per cent for five years, and is not to exceed prime lending rate for 25 years. The loan is payable on demand, but until then, payable in semi-annual blended payments of $41,866.

The loan for retrofitting is also set at 3.5 per cent interest rate for five years. The loan is also payable on demand but until then semi-annual blended payments of principal and interest at $23,042 will be made. The remaining amortization period is 60 months.

The 16,360-square foot industrial shop located at 2602 19 Street, is expected to house the public works department. The purpose is for more space, something Mayor Wittal said last month is needed for the department to grow.

Council granted first reading last Tuesday. Second and third are scheduled for August 30.

Fire service agreement approved

Council approved a new fire service agreement between Mountain View County and Didsbury last week. The five-year agreement outlines the provisions of fire protection services to the residents of Didsbury and a portion of the county surrounding the town. Part of the new agreements allows for shared resources within the region. Operating costs, including training, advertising, membership and insurance will be split 50/50 between town and county up to $130,000. Variable costs including equipment repairs, meal expenses and fuel will be funded based on a ratio of fire calls to rural versus urban areas. A regional reserve fund, made up of 10 per cent of revenue will be used for regional initiatives. The town, in consultation with Mountain View County will appoint the fire chief. When first introduced to the draft last month, Coun. Rick Mousseau requested the fire chief is still chosen internally during the annual elections at the department. Mousseau, current fire chief who will step down at the end of the summer, said it was important the department weighs in on, and trusts the chief appointed. "The intention is the process will be the same as in the past where members vote but the one difference is council will have to approve that," said CAO Roy Brown last month.

Area development plan gets first reading.

A public hearing is set for the end of the month to receive final feedback from the public on the East Downtown Area Redevelopment Plan.

Started as far back as February 2010, the document will guide future growth and development within the east downtown area around 19th Street going east. The area is currently commercial and industrial. Going forward 20 to 25 years in the future council wants that area to act as a gateway into the town. Part of the plan is to incorporate more green space and bring in more mixed commercial buildings with a similar look to the historic buildings downtown. The plan envisions commercial office, retail and second floor residential development. First reading was granted last Tuesday. A public hearing will be held August 30 6 p.m.

Mountain View Arts Fest coming

A two-day arts festival is being planned for Didsbury October 1 and 2. It will be the first of its kind for the town, and coincides with Alberta Arts Days.

Members of the planning committee are planning to make use of the library, museum and high school during the week to showcase talents of local artists.

Council agreed to requested road closures from 9 a.m. October 1 until October 2 at 6 p.m. from 19th Avenue between 21 Street and 20th Street as well as 20th Street from 20th Avenue and 18th Avenue.

To: Harmattan Co-Stream Project Stakeholders
Re: Harmattan Co-Stream Project Construction Notice

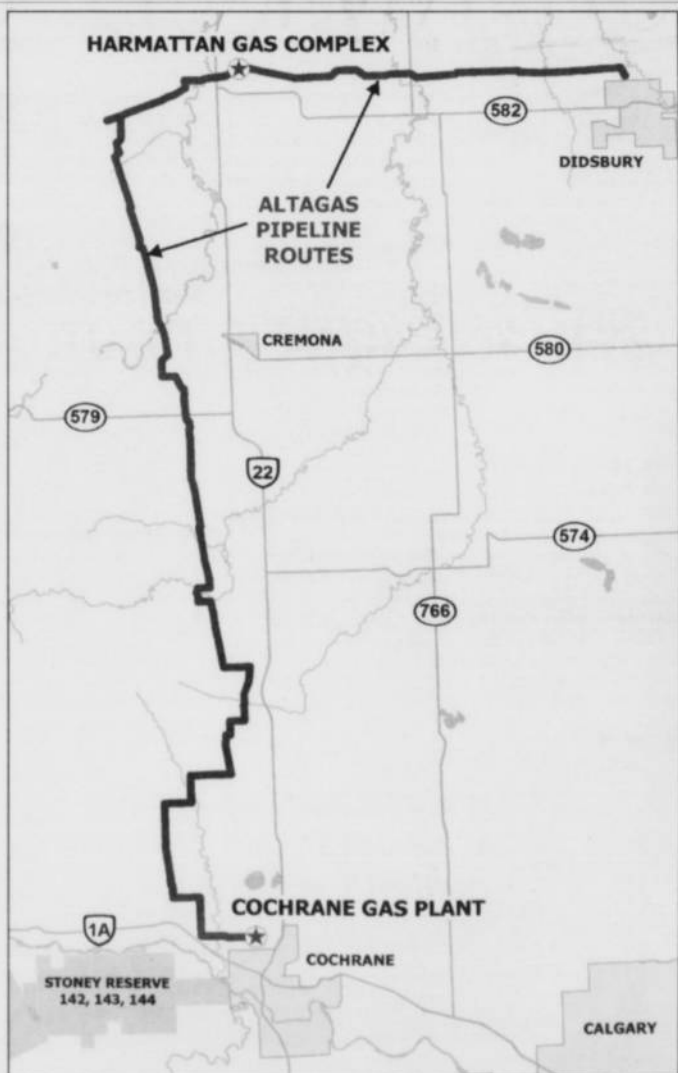

Harmattan Gas Processing Limited Partnership (HGPLP), by its general partner, Taylor Processing Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of AltaGas Ltd. would like to inform you that construction activities for the Harmattan Co-Stream Project will be taking place from August to November 2011. The construction will include the following components:

- Upgrading activities at the Harmattan Plant;
- Construction of approximately 82 kilometers of 610 mm (24 inch) outside diameter (OD) natural gas pipeline, which will connect the Harmattan Gas Plant with mainline gas transmission pipelines owned by TransCanada Pipelines Ltd.; and
- Construction of a high vapour pressure (HVP) pipeline transporting propane between the Harmattan Gas Plant and the Didsbury Rail Terminal. The Harmattan to Didsbury HVP pipeline is approximately 23 kilometers long and 114.3 mm (4 inch) outside diameter (OD).

Please be advised that during the construction activities for this project traffic and noise may increase for a short period of time at the pipeline installation sites and along the pipeline route. HGPLP will coordinate with local authorities and regional regulatory agencies throughout the construction and operation of the pipeline to ensure effective equipment transportation control and pipeline safety.

HGPLP is committed to ensuring that the project is developed and executed with high regard for environmental, social, and economic considerations. All necessary measures will be taken to minimize construction impacts.

For additional Project Information, please call 1 866 997 3895.
For any emergency related to the project, please call the Harmattan Co-Stream 24 hour emergency line at 1 403 335 3321.

Didsbury coach helps national queen

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

Dakota Passey still can't believe it. At 17, she's not only won the title of this year's Alberta High School Rodeo Queen competition, but she went on to win the National High School Rodeo Queen title last week. The competition, held in Wyoming every year, brings together 41 competitors from Canada, the U.S. and Australia. This is the second time ever a Canadian has won since joining the association in 1972. The first time a Canadian won was in 1985.

"It was amazing, unexpected," said Passey, from Raymond.

"I went in with the goal of being in the top 20. The goal slightly climbed from top 20 to top 10 then to top five and pretty soon they crowned me and it still hasn't quite sunk in yet."

Passey started competing this year for queen pageantry after deciding she wanted to give it a try. She said she's grown up in the rodeo world, with her father having been a bull rider.

Jo Lawes, Alberta High School Rodeo queen coordinator, said the news is phenomenal.

"It's so rare. We've been in the top 10 a handful of times but we've never been in top four or five."

Lawes, from Didsbury, has coached queens and potential queens for the last five years with her business Queenie Central, in Didsbury, and has worked with local girls such as Katie Lucas from Carstairs and Didsbury's Gillian Shields, current Miss Rodeo Sundre.

This year she was appointed queen coordinator for the Alberta High School Rodeo and was down in Wyoming with Passey.

"She won in the appearance category, the personal interview and modelling and tied in speech. She was second in personality and she got third in horsemanship," said Lawes, listing off Passey's accomplishments.

"It's stressful, but she had a huge support system," said Lawes of the family that came with Passey to the event. The mom stayed up at night and glued rhinestones to her outfits and her younger sisters helped clean the barn and feed the horse.

"This is the world's largest rodeo. When she was in the grandstands in the rodeo and walking around kids would bombard her. They make it their mission to get an autographed picture of every single rodeo queen. They get a list of all 42 contestants and they go around and check them off until they get them all signed," said Lawes of the 600 autographs Passey went through while she was there.

"They also have a special needs rodeo with two performances every day, so she had to be at two rodeos every day and sometimes events in between such as a trade fair or something," said Lawes, who estimated they changed outfits at least three times every day.

Passey will now be spending the year promoting the rodeo and flying to various places within the States including Denver, Colorado in two weeks.

"I'm very excited to travel everywhere," said Passey.

"Since I've been home there hasn't been one moment to breathe; it's been full speed ahead. It's been fun."

Police Briefs

BY SYLVIA COLE & JOSH SKAPIN

Vandalism at Catholic church

Reports of vandalism to St. Anthony's Catholic Church were reported twice last week. On July 25 at 3 p.m. police were told sometime between July 13 and 21 someone had smashed the front window of the building. Last week, a complainant reported that sometime between July 22 and 25 an angel statue was stolen from the front of the property. No witnesses or suspects are known at this time.

Chainsaw stolen

An orange John Stewart chainsaw was stolen from the back of a pickup truck in Didsbury last week. Sometime between 6 p.m. July 21 and 9 a.m. the next day, the chainsaw was taken from the vehicle parked along the 2100 block of 25th Avenue. The chainsaw was orange in colour with black lettering and a black carrying case. Anyone with information is encouraged to contact Const. Morrison at the detachment.

Crowbar used to damage car

Somebody broke into a vehicle parked along Westhill Place in Didsbury between the evening of July 23rd and early the next morning. A crowbar was taken from the trunk and then used to damage the front of the car.

Fatal ATV accident

A Calgary woman has died as a result of injuries suffered in an all terrain vehicle (ATV) accident near Carstairs.

The 70-year-old woman was driving an ATV with a 46-year-old Carstairs man as a passenger on a rural property southwest of Carstairs around 4 p.m. July 28.

According to Didsbury RCMP, the driver lost control of the ATV and struck an outbuilding on the property. The woman was transported by ambulance to a Calgary hospital. Police say the woman succumbed to her injuries later that night. The status of the passenger is unknown. According to the RCMP, neither the driver nor the passenger were wearing helmets. Police say this was the driver's first attempt at driving an ATV.

110. In Memoriam 110. In Memoriam

In loving memory of my dear son
Melvin John (Smudge) Milne
who passed away August 5, 2003

Though your smile is gone forever and your hand we cannot touch
Still we have so many memories of the one we loved so much.
Your memory is our keepsake with which we'll never part
God has you in his keeping,
And we have you in our Hearts

Lovingly remembered & missed very much.
Love, Mom

It has been three years today
Since a stroke took Lucianne Trick's life
She was such a special gift to us all
We do miss her a lot every single day.

She is still a daily word said proudly by my son and I
And to many who knew her well

We can remember her passion for sharing and life.
Serving another human as Jesus did is a wonderful gift to give.
Lucianne was always willing to share her energy and knowledge, to so many children in School and Top Note Music School
We learned from her gardening, growing and nurturing ways
Making her a true gift for us all. May God bless her.

Thinking of you still very often with love -
Gerald, Lana, Mona, Teena, Mike, Lloyd, Wesley, Dana, Brendan, and Kayla.
